almost concealed her face. "I come to execute the will of my more than mother."

The voice and manner of the humble messenger struck the young clergyman so forcibly, impelled by some secret influence of respect, he arose and bowed.

"I am a native of Brioude, and was once a little outcast in it," continued the noble lady with emotion, "and I owe all I am, or shall ever be, to one who adopted it, and hundred hundred of whom dwell on earth. She died," said Marie, her tones changing from the accents of high pride and gratitude to those of softest sadness, "leaving her home to be devoted to the purpose to which each moment her the power of considering her life. I have now acquired the means necessary for establishing the little school which is dear mother intended, and I shall devote the life which she preserved for me to the object of her love. Madame Delorme, sir, left the deed of settlement with M. Boudeaux, and perhaps you are now the trustee in the business."

Marie received an answer in the negative. She frowned, and when she looked upon her Palmer, half the eyes agitated with profound emotion. Presently after, when I have so longed to see Ernest at last, stepping forward and greeting the friend of Marie! Thou who bearest me to my mother in thy kindness, and eyes, and heart, welcome to my humble home!"

The shutters of Madame Melcie's house were soon thrown open to the sunbeams, and they came dancing in at the windows, and played with the curls of little children whom Marie Brioude taught to read; and they kissed the rosy cheeks and lips of the children whom Marie Brioude taught to pray. The flowers that had so long, grappled with each other in uncultured animosity, now shot up in beauty and order when she approached them. Ernest Melcour, who had often dwelt upon his own old dwelling, now illumined by woman's devotion and woman's love. He often spoke to Marie of their first meeting, for he soon recognized her, who was only a servant in the house of Frederic; and he dwelt so often on the memory of the feelings which those moments inspired, even Marie loved to hear him recount what had once been painful to her. By and by the people began to shake their heads, and smile, and declare that something would come of Ernest's visit to Marie Brioude.

On the midsummer day after Marie's return, there was a joyous fete upon the village green of Rhonde. The little children of Marie's school, with clean rosy faces and bouquets of flowers in their hands, were drawn up in a semi-circle, while all the villagers, old and young, dressed in their holiday attire, stood smiling around them. There was, truly something of great importance to be done in Brioude that day, for they stood and rubbed their hands and smiled, and looked glowing before, the walked gentleman arm with Ernest Melcour, and then turned and looked at Marie, who presented cake and wine to them with the grace of love and care. At last, the maid-queen, whom the young school mistress, and his heart seemed to grow too large for his bosom as he ramped till his cheeks, and uncovered a curled which he carried in his hand. Citizens," he said with emotion, "constituted dear Marie Brioude long receiving the highest 'Monty in prize' of this season, for her well-timed zeal and for invariable devotion to the will of her benefactress." As he spoke, he placed the wreath on her breast, as the order for several hundred Burns in her hand, while the children threw their bouquets at her feet, and the villagers rent the air with their acclamations. In a few years after, children than the children of the poor were sent to share the love of Marie Melcour; and the wife of the clergyman was dutifully schooled the duties of her office, as had been the orphan girl. Like the sun which warms and illumines the earth, so the wonder winds that will glad heart of God and beautiful nature from the dark over the deep, like rests which spangle the black arch of night, and hail the soul of man, the Creator up to heaven, Marie continued to the end of her life to serve her Maker, and to bless manifold by constancy to her servant.

ARKANSAS AND CORPORATIONS.—It is seldom, in these enlightened days, that we are treated with an old fashioned diatribe on corporations so seldom, indeed, that when such an event occurs, it is worthy of particular notice. During a recent discussion in the United States Senate on a bill to renew and continue in force the charter of the Potomac Insurance Company, Mr. Borland of Arkansas, launched forth into an invective against Corporations, which would have done credit to a locofoco orator in the palmiest days of locofoco-ism, when opposition to Corporations was a matter of political principle.

Mr. Borland asserted, in the course of his speech, that had we never had any corporations our country would have been in a far better condition than it now is!! The Senator did not attempt to prove the assertion, and we may be excused, perhaps, if we decline to take up the side in opposition to the soundest political economists of the country. If the unexampled prosperity of this country in commerce, population and wealth, is attributable to one cause more than to another, it is to the effect of wonderful spirit in developing the manufacturing resources of the country, increasing the facilities of intercommunication, and in giving an impulse to business. Take away the railroads which have been built by associated capital, and which could have been constructed and worked in no other way, and what would be the present state of the country?

Mr. Borland boasted in his speech that banks were prohibited in the State which he represented. There were twelve at the time the State was admitted into the Union! They were then unincorporated, the result was bankruptcy and pecuniary ruin. It was suggested, in reply to these remarks, by Mr. Badger, that the banks were improperly managed—and that if the people of Arkansas were under the influence of a mania, they would endanger themselves by the use of corporations, just as madmen endanger themselves and others with very useful instruments.

Mr. Borland is the type and representative of the people of this State. At the present session of Arkansas may not be unattractive. The State is, as might be expected, hopelessly locofoco. There is probably no State in the Union, of which so little is known in the older States. When by the time of the State it is not infrequently in connection with broils and affrays. It has given a name to a murderous instrument, and the "Arkansas toothpick" is better known than the State from which it derives its name. We never hear of any person emigrating to Arkansas, and there are few individuals in the Atlantic States who have relatives or friends there. The State has a population, but little exceeding that of Boston, including twenty thousand slaves. There are no internal improvements in the State, and a liberal grant by Congress of 500,000 acres of land for purposes of improvement, were, by the Legislature of 1849, distributed among the counties. There are no colleges in the State. A liberal donation of land was made by Congress to establish a seminary, which the Legislature, in utter defiance of the intention of Congress, distributed among the counties! There are few common schools in the State. In each township, (of thirty-six sections) of the public lands, one section is given by Congress for the use of schools; but the Legislature authorizes them to be sold.

Such is corporation-hating Arkansas, and such it will remain until associated capital develops the resources of the State, spans it with railroads, and infuses life and vigor where all is now stagnation.—Such, would, perhaps, be the condition of the whole country, had the policy of discouraging corporations obtained in all the States.—Boston Journal.

DUEL EXCITEMENT RIOT.—A despatch from Paris, 19, dated the 21st, says:

There was a scene of extraordinary excitement here to-day, owing to the postponement of the examination of Bedeau and Williams for the murder of Mr. Hewett. It was to have taken place yesterday, but was postponed by Government in January last. Large masses of people collected in the city, not being aware of the fact, and on learning it they attempted to take the law into their own hands; got possession of the peaceful and quiet of the prisoners—but they were subsequently dispersed and quiet was restored.

The New England Society's Anniversary. Webster and Sir Henry Bulwer's speech.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.

There was a great time at the Astor House last evening, and the way the pate viands stowed into stomachs and the champaign [illegible] flow about the splendid dining-hall, was [illegible] slow. The occasion was the celebration of the Anniversary of the New England Society of this city. The dinner was served at 6 o'clock, and about three hundred sat down to the tables, determined to have a glorious time, and they succeeded to their heart's content. In the dinner was disposed of and the cloth removed, preparation was made for toasts and speeches. At one end of the hall, behind Corinthian pillars partially enclosed, a number of fashionably dressed and beautiful ladies were well bestowed. The sons of the Pilgrims were in high spirits of course. The toasts were excellent, very well, and drank with much enthusiasm. A band of musicians was placed at the lower end of the hall, who occasionally discoursed most excellent music. But the great point of attraction was Daniel Webster, who sat on the right of Mr. Grinnell, the President of the Society. Rev. Mr. Bellows, in a humorous description of this city, rose in answer to a toast upon the New England clergy. He spoke very eloquently, and occasionally interspersed his remarks with some wit. A bible was presented him which was brought over by the Pilgrims in the Mayflower. J. Prescott Hall also addressed upon the subject of New England schools, but the guests were too anxious to hear Webster, who responded to the following toast, viz: "The President—The Constitution and the Union, which evidently prepared at all points." He came all the way from Washington to attend this celebration. He began very quietly, and at once arrested the attention of the audience. They rose en masse—stamped the floor—clapped their hands—broke—in upon the speaker's remarks, and, for the next quarter of an hour, had a rich intellectual banquet—and they got it to a certainty. I have heard Webster many times, but I never heard him speak more eloquently on any occasion. I would give you an account of his speech, but I presume you will give it to your readers. The Herald's report is certainly [illegible] correct, and perhaps other reports may be; but I have not read them. I know the Herald's is to the very letter. This report, precisely as he delivered it. There were many points in it truly eloquent, and the whole was Websterian to a charm.

Sir Henry Bulwer was the next speaker.—He was called out by a toast, touching Old England and Young America. Sir Henry has a very slight form and stands erect as a May pole. He is of himself that he is a very slender representative of John Bull. He is much inclined to be of flashes of wit, and the whole tenor of his remarks were in that direction. His voice is not good, and his pronunciation makes it exceedingly difficult to understand him. In that respect he differs very essentially from Mr. Webster. He is quite a young looking man and wears a respectable (as to size) goatee under his chin. I have to doubt he is really thirty, but he uses too many words. Many of his wit. It is too much covered up, and he is altogether too long in getting at it. He speaks very much like Sir William Don, who has recently been playing in a comedian at the Broadway Theater. And Sir William praises up his manner of speaking the pure English to this effect. But I must say, I have not been able to see either the force or justice of the above remarks. Sir Henry, I shall hardly understand, although I gave him a hundredfold attention; but I could get every [illegible] Mr. Webster uttered. I don't place much confidence in such criticisms, even coming from such a respectable quarter as it did. The Union Committee had Mr. Webster out yesterday to the City Hall, in the Governor's room, where he made some very eloquent remarks upon the state of the Nation. He was received with tremendous cheering, and his speech was listened to with breathless attention. His opinion is that the crisis is passed and that our Union is safe. May his opinion be confirmed by coming events.

While writing, there is great excitement in the City Hall about a fugitive slave who is on trial for his bondage or his freedom. What the result may be I cannot say. The Commissioner will require strong evidence before he sends the poor fellow back to bondage, especially since the Commissioner in Philadelphia recently sent one back upon such slim evidence that the slaveholder said he was not his slave, and the fellow returned to his family and friends. That was a sad go for that Commissioner. He must be in very bad repute among the freemen of Bloomy land. These gentlemen in office must be wide awake, and if any mercy is to be exercised, it must be exercised in favor of the slave. That is a sound principle of law and must not be overlooked in the trial of their fugitive slaves. If there are any doubts in the cases, the slaves of right ought to have the benefit of those doubts.

What with the celebration of the Sons of the Pilgrims, Webster's speeches at the Astor House and in the Governor's Room, the trial of the fugitive slave, and the Holidays, we are having quite an excited time. Great preparations are being made for the holiday week, and more Gothamites will get drunk than the sober ugly dream of in their philosophy. There will be alcoholic liquor enough drunk in this city the coming week to turn down Bangor, or float her shipping. This is a great country, it's a jolly people will drink so.

The Theaters will have patronage enough this week.

Brougham opened his new Lyceum last night to an overflowing house. His establishment will suit into old Burton's, for they have now become rivals for money and fame. The Married Bachelor, a new play recently brought out at Burton's, and written for her by a theater in style and superiority to, or, indeed, it would be to say it not for its broad allusions and double entendres. Burton ought to look it, prune it and make it decent; but he prefers making dollars to making morals,—so we go.

☞ Recently in Philadelphia an agent of a slave holder at the South claimed a colored man, Adam Gibson, as a fugitive slave. The case was brought before Commissioner Ingraham, and one man swore to the identity of the fugitive. Two other witnesses swore that they had known Gibson as the slave of another man, who had provided for his freedom in his will. These witnesses were colored men, and the Commissioner took the responsibility of delivering up the man as a fugitive, and he was taken to Maryland, and the reputed owner, William Knight of Cecil county, sent for.

As soon as Mr. Knight saw the prisoner, he said—"That is not my slave. I know this man Adam; he was formerly a slave in this neighborhood; now he obtained his liberty I do not know; he is not mine." Mr. Knight affords the officers every opportunity to restore the colored man to his family and friends.

Gibson has returned to Philadelphia, and warrants have been issued for the arrest of those who were engaged in his capture. The case, all through, plunges the Commissioner in a most woeful predicament. It is quite refreshing as showing the manly bearing of a slave holder under circumstances which might tempt a man to silent acquiescence in the wrong doing of his agent. We like to record such an instance, and we cannot but indulge the hope that his conduct forms the rule, and not the exception of the principles of his class.

It seems that Emery Ring, the real fugitive, was in conversation with Gibson when the man was arrested, but the agent mistook the one for the other, and hence the result of the case.

☞ The Mechanics' Association, in view of the very handsome support given by the public to their course of scientific lectures for the present winter, have engaged Dr. Charles T. Jackson to deliver an extra lecture on Monday evening.

This lecture on a Grain of Corn is full of interest on such a subject well, may be in the hands of a man so thoroughly acquainted with the natural sciences as Dr. Jackson. The elements of several departments of the sciences are contained in a single grain of corn, and the developments of the natural history may bring them out very prominently.

On Tuesday evening next the regular course of lectures on Geology will be commenced by Dr. Jackson and those who have not already procured tickets for the full course, can obtain them for the lecture on Geology at a reduced price.

☞ In Gardiner, during the gale of Tuesday last, a fire broke out in the brick building owned and occupied by D. Maher, grocer and by A. Ring, butcher; fire took in Ring's apartments, upper part occupied as dwellings by Maher and widow Stuart; goods partly saved. Building west, occupied as grocery by E. C. Harvey—dwelling above; goods removed much damaged. Next door west occupied by C. Stuart, grocery; goods removed, much injured. Wooden building east of Maher's first door occupied by P. Wheeler—a family above; second door, Kelly & Rowell, shoe store—dwelling above; goods removed, much injured by water. Front of building occupied by Maher and Ring also that occupied by Harvey, and tinshop; but the chambers and back buildings are burned out. Building occupied by Kelly & Rowell and P. Wheeler also; that by Stuart considerably injured. One man, Sir. Geo Stone, was badly but not dangerously injured by the falling of a window sash which struck him on the face, inflicting an ugly but not serious wound.

The moon had a very hard time of it in the cold and the deep snow drifts.

The Mourner Comforted.

This, a neat little volume published by M. W. Dodd, in New York, and is composed of various and beautiful extracts consolatory, on the loss of friends, selected by Rev. Thomas Dane from English authors. It is an appropriate volume to be placed in the hands of those whose hearts have been torn by the entrance of death into their loved circle and removing from it some dear one whose absence spreads a pall over the feelings. These extracts point to the higher life, the source of hope to the mourner, and to the angel bands so kind and free to those who enter the spirit land, and to God the Guardian of all whom and love, who has provided an [illegible] home for the spirit's life, and whose heavenly hand is ever outstretched for the grasp of the disconsolate and stricken of heart.

The volume may be found at the bookstore of Messrs. B. F. Duren & Co.

☞ The editors up in Somerset county are raising quite a muss about the treatment of women. The fattest man in the State, the editor of the Democratic Clarion, who is sometimes described as a "Walking Air-tight," does not relish being very near the women, for he declares that it gives him the greatest pleasure to give the ladies all the sidewalk and half the road. That is being a little too shy—by at least half the road.

At an annual meeting of the Billings and Holden Musical Society, Dec. 25th, 1850, the following gentlemen were chosen officers for the ensuing year:

Henry Little, President; Alexander Drummond, Henry Call, Joseph Wing and Seth E. Benson, Vice Presidents; Levi Cram, Secretary; John S. Ayer, 2d. N. Mansfield, John M. Foster, Joseph W. Chapman and Oren Favor, Executive Committee; Amos Stickney, 1st Chorister, Mathew Ray, 2d do; Richard Thurston, 3d do; Moses Wingate, 4th do.

☞ The Calais Advertiser cuts in pretty heavily as to the manner in which the public lots have been disposed of in that county. Our own impression is that the transactions of the Land Office in this State for a few years past should be thoroughly sifted and brought before the people; but our impression very strongly is that nothing of the kind will be attempted, or if attempted, will not succeed. The growl of the Advertiser will pass for a growl and nothing else.

☞ Messrs. B. F. Duren & Co. have upon their counters the admirable work for youth, by T. S. Arthur, entitled "All for the Best; or The Old Peppermint Man." It is published in beautiful style by Messrs. Crosby & Nichols, Boston, who are starting themselves to give to the youth of our country a handsome variety of excellent little books.

MERRY'S MUSEUM AND PARLEY'S MAGAZINE.—Messrs. S. T. Allen & Co., of New York are the publishers of a monthly illustrated periodical for children and youth, with the above title, and which is edited with great skill by S. G. Goodrich, the author of the famous "Peter Parley's Tales." We have submitted this work to the best test we know of for such a publication—the judgment and taste of our little folks—and their interest in it satisfies us, most conclusively, that it is a work of merit, pitched upon the right key, and worthy to grace and render agreeable any circle of children in our broad land. The terms are one dollar a year, and the new volume commences in January.

☞ Our telegraphic despatch announces the glad intelligence that the steamship Ohio has arrived at Norfolk, and that all her passengers are well. We learn that Mr. Joseph Leavitt and Mr. Clements, two of our citizens, are passengers on board the Ohio, on their return from California. Both have families in this city, in daily expectation of their return, who have been extremely anxious for some days regarding their safety.

We are requested to publish the following result of the proposals for furnishing wood for the County for the ensuing year:

	For hard wood.	For hemlock.
John S. Chadwick,	$3.07½	$2.60
Wentworth Lord,	3.74	2.74
James J. Bisson,	4.50	"
George Willington,	3.80	2.40
Joseph N. Downe,	4.00	3.00
Charles Durham,	4.75	3.00

It will be seen that the contract was obtained by Capt. Willington, his offer for the whole being two dollars less than that of any other.

☞ The people on some of the cross streets have unanimously thanked the authorities Commissioner of streets for running his snow plough through them and thus making a passage through the high and solid snow drifts.

☞ Councillor Babson has commenced at Augusta a criminal prosecution against Mr. Charles Barnes, for an alleged libel. Mr. Barnes is in jail, his trial which will soon take place.

The vacancy in the Representative district of Augusta is to be filled at the annual city meeting on the second Monday in March next.

The Boston Times says—We learn that Mr. Caleb M. Dyer, the last of the Shakers of New Hampshire, has purchased a large tract of land on the Ohio River in Ohio. It is probable that recent publications in these parts against Christ must have made the moral atmosphere too hot for them to live here comfortably, and so they contemplate removal to the west in preference to further expansion in New England!!!

FIRE AT WATERVILLE.—The building occupied by Mr. Joseph Hill, painter, and owned by Dea. Seamans, and the adjoining one occupied by Mr. Rufus Nason, machinist, and others, were burned on the 23d inst. Mr. Nason's loss is $1800; Mr. Hill's $600.—[Kennebec Journal.

☞ The real value of property in Massachusetts is at least one thousand millions.

STEAMER OHIO IN DISTRESS—HER ARRIVAL AT NEW ORLEANS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.

The mail steamship Ohio, from Havana, is reported as having put into New Orleans on the 25th inst., in distress, leaking, &c. Her passengers all well.

FURTHER FROM THE OHIO.

The Mercury, last evening, contained the following telegraphic despatch:

NORFOLK, Dec. 27th

The Ohio arrived at this port this afternoon.

The passengers were at work at the pumps three days in order to keep her up. There were four hundred on board, including two hundred and fifty-four returned Californians. The steamer is considerably damaged in the hull, rigging and upper works as well as furniture. The damage sustained is not far from $30,000.

The broken one of her engines will keep her passage from New Orleans to Havana and proceeded to the latter port with the other.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 27.

A large number of passengers from the Ohio arrived here this morning.

Fatal Shipwreck.

We learn that the schr. Arcade, Capt. Crockett, sailed from Frenchfort, Me., loaded with stone and bound to Philadelphia, went ashore on Plum Island about two and a half miles east of Emerson's rock, during the storm on Monday night. Her broadside was stove in, her decks ripped up and masts cut, hanging by the spring stay. The dead body of a youngman, 18 or 20 years old, was found on the beach.

No papers were found on board the vessel, all loose things having been washed away. The Captain was the only one on board that was saved. He succeeded in swimming ashore, and getting into a barn, remained there during the night. The names of those lost are Jos. Scott, of Hallifax, N. S., mate; Benj. Hanson, of Frenchfort, Me., steward; James Kneeland, of do.; Henry Murphy, of New York; John Shannon, of Greenock, Scotland.

The schr. ashore on Salisbury Beach is the Ceres of, and from Machias, for New York. The mate and the cook perished, and it is said five others were saved. The mate was taken from the rigging alive, but died soon after reaching the shore.—[Boston Adv.

HAIR PRESERVATIVE.

THIS article has been before the public nearly five years, and the proprietor is prepared to say that for REMOVING DANDRUFF, from the scalp, RESTORING HAIR WHERE FALLEN OFF TEMPORARILY, and giving it a BEAUTIFUL SOFTNESS AND GLOSS, CANNOT BE EXCELLED. The basis of this Preservative is a pure vegetable Oil, extracted from a plant found growing luxuriantly in the Western States, and which possesses, in a remarkable degree, the essential properties requisite for REPRODUCING AND BEAUTIFYING THE HAIR, by acting upon and reviving its glands or roots.—Those who faithfully apply this Preservative, will be surprised at finding how silk-like and glossy it renders the Hair, while it clears the scalp of scurf or dandruff, and affords the most agreeable sensation. It has already been extensively used, and in every instance has given perfect satisfaction.

REASONS FOR USING THIS PRESERVATIVE.

1. It is a very pretty CLEAR article, and has an agreeable perfume.

2. It is put up in a convenient form and at a very reasonable price.

3. Acting as a stimulant, it affords relief to the Head-ache.

4. It gives to hard trashy Hair a desirable moisture and softness.

5. It promptly arrests the falling off of the Hair, where that evil has commenced, and promotes the growth of new Hair. In fine, it does all for the Hair that any preparation for restoring and improving this ornament of the Head can possibly do.
